LEARN THROUGH ART

Where Art Meets Education.

KEEP YOUR LITTLE ARTIST SAFE:

HOW TO AVOID TOXIC CHEMICALS IN ARTS AND CRAFTS

It's not just packaged food where your child is exposed to health risks but also the stationery. Colouring, crafting and painting are the portraits of creativity, but art supplies can emit toxic fumes and leave unsafe chemical residues on curious little hands. There is no need to give up on art but the need is to choose smarter and safer products.

How do Toxins get in our body?

Substances of concern can enter kids body in three ways.

1. Skin contact
2. Inhalation
3. Ingestion

Ensure Phthalate Free

Phthalates are chemicals, found in many stationery products like Pencils, Erasers, Sharpeners. Usually it is not listed on labels. Exposure can result in Hormonal imbalance, Asthma & even Cancer. It is banned in Europe & certain states of USA.

Be Lead and Heavy Metal Free

Lead is highly toxic and can be found in plastics and paint pigments. It can cause range of neurological problems, blood disorder, depression and learning disorders in children.

Play with Natural Dough & Clay

We absorb up to 60% of what our skin touches. Your Child's body absorbs 40-50% more. They are at a higher risk! PVC based Modelling Clay can contain chemicals which may be absorbed while being played with. Use Natural Dough and Clay with Food Grade Colors and Edible Oils to avoid any scare.

Always Wash Hands after Arts and Crafts. Especially before Snacking!

Share Safety Not Bacteria and Cuts

Plastic Rulers, Compass and Scissors can have Rough Edges and Sharp Points which can cut through the Child's Skin. Check for Rounded Edges and Blunt Scissors which ideally have Microbial Protection.
